To remind man of his mortality, the priest makes the sign of the cross upon the forehead of each penitent, while uttering the warning: "Remember, man, that dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return."

AT BROADWAY THEATRE.

High Class Vaudeville and Motion Pictures.

The first vaudeville at the Broadway theatre this week was on Tuesday, when at both the afternoon and evening performances there were large audiences, and the program was well received during each act, as all the entertainers are exceptions to the rule.

The big liners are Mr. and Mrs. Colby, who have a change from the usual run of entertainers in that their act is a double act, and is a comedy, and takes and closes with a musical combination which wins rounds of applause. The comedy features the act make it one of the best of the year.

The Devereux Twins dance and sing to the delight of the audience and their costume changes are accomplished in the twinkling of an eye. Their act, like the Pat and the Colby's, gets a big hand. The latter do a song and dance act. Touhey is a clever manipulator of the human body, and he has a fine line of jokes and reels.

Lewis and Young as comedians keep the audience in a hearty laugh. Their line of work makes a happy impression and they are obliged to return often to the stage to receive a change of motion pictures, but each day's films are of the selected type and sure to entertain and instruct.

FIRE IN AUSTIN BLOCK.

Smoke from Blaze in Ash Barrel in Hallway Filled Building and Good Start Had Been Made.

Shortly before ten o'clock Tuesday evening Chemical Co. No. 1 was called across the street to the Austin building, which was filled with smoke, the members of the Second Division, A. O. H. having been attracted by the large amount of smoke in the building. There was no fire on their floor, and they informed the fire company.

After looking about the rear of the building, Captain Connell from the fireway, saw a fire in the hallway on the second floor near the Holston Mission doorway and pushed in the Main street door, which was locked. A good sized blaze was burning in the metal ash barrel and close to it was a lounge and inflammable material and the beginning of a good fire was under way. The can was taken to the side walk and the fire was soon put out with chemical. There will be no damage except from smoke.

WOMAN MOST LUCKY IN THE RAILROAD

Mrs. Laura Mitchell Fell or was Knocked from Railroad Trestle into River while Train was Passing—Had Been Working Here in Silk Mill but was on Her Way to Join Her Husband.

Mrs. Laura Mitchell, aged 35, met with a sudden death at Montville on Tuesday evening shortly after nine o'clock, when she either fell or was knocked from the railroad bridge north of the Montville station of the Central Vermont Railway company into the water, and at midnight the body had not been found, although a number were searching for it with a boat and hooks.

Mrs. Mitchell has been living in this city at No. 23 Mechanic street, at the home of Mrs. Charles Church, where she boarded while working in the Givernard Brothers' silk mill in Mechanic street. She left there Saturday, saying she was going to New London, saying she had been asked to go to Montville to join her husband, who had gotten a job there. That was the last seen of her. Whether she went to Montville or New London then or not is unknown.

On Tuesday evening she applied to Thomas Davis, watchman at the Bigelow-Harriman company's works near the Montville station, and asked for assistance in getting across the trestle. Mr. Davis tried to dissuade her, but she insisted on going. She was in order to join her husband at Kitemaug, he finally consented to go with her. She had a small trunk with her, and when a train was seen approaching, there was not time to get off. The bridge was so low that she fell down on one of the stringers while he got onto another, holding onto the out-boards of the stringers and was pulled down. Mrs. Mitchell had a dog with her and a dress suit case and some bundles. In the glare of the headlights, Davis rather lost track of the woman, although she was all right as he placed her. He noticed, however, that she was reaching for the dog as the train came on, and whether she lost her balance in doing so or was struck by the train is not known. He never saw her again, as no trace of her was to be found after the train had passed. The bundles she had were found floating in the water later.

Directly under where they were standing was open water, although there was much thin ice near by. Mr. Davis never heard a sound like a cry or a splash and was dumfounded when he tried to locate her on the stringers. He was there for some time, and hooks efforts were made through-out the night to locate the body, but without success. A strong current from the cove into the river at the time it is thought the body may have been carried into the stream and will be located today.

It was not known who the woman was until the dress suit case which she had been carrying was taken back to the office of the Bigelow-Harriman company and opened. In it was found letters addressed to Mrs. Laura Mitchell, 23 Mechanic street, Norwich. Inquiries here later showed that she had been living at that address in the Church family Captain Linton was called from Montville in regard to the matter and he later found that the address given in the letter was correct.

At Montville it was thought that her husband is Edwin or Eugene Mitchell, and that he is staying at Kitemaug with a man named Bushnell, where he is a caretaker.

A. C. SWAN ENTERTAINS DRIVERS AND OTHER GUESTS.

Banquet Held in Halls Club Dining Room and Greatly Enjoyed.

With covers laid for forty, the number including his drivers and other guests, Amos C. Swan, president and treasurer of the A. C. Swan company, entertained at a banquet on Tuesday evening in the men's dining room at the Halls club. The company consisted of 8 o'clock and passed a delightful evening there until about 11.

The tables were set with a variety of an open rectangle, and at each place was a boutonniere, while three miniature automobiles looked on the wall, forming the centerpiece for the tables.

The following was the menu finely served by the Halls club:

Gasoline 76 Degrees Test.

Martell Dots a la "Sheridan"

Texas Hot and Cold Sauce.

Roast "Mutton"

"Old" Sauce

Annular Ball Bearings.

"Murphy's" Delmonico

"Peppery" Salad

"Cadillac" "Hartford" Rubber Cakes

Muffler Explosions

Transmission Oil

When the proper time arrived, after the discussion of the menu had passed, Amos C. Swan, president of the company, assumed the place of master of ceremonies, calling upon Alcega, in behalf of the force at the garage a handsome large black walrus leather traveling bag, which was completely furnished with set of sterling silver traveling necessities. All united in singing For He's a Good Fellow.

Amos C. Swan, president of the company, responded pleasantly in appreciation of the gift and with praise for the character of the men who were with him in the machines of the garage.

An informal program was carried out, in which each member was loudly applauded, the program including remarks by James P. Sheridan, Scotch songs by Alcega, and a remembrance by Dr. A. P. Howard, solos by James McGarry, recitation by William McGinnis, and selections by William McGinnis, James McGarry, Charles McGarry, James McGarry, and Alfred McGarry.

There were choruses, which were given with fine effect, and the whole evening proved an event which was especially enjoyable.

SODALITY PLAYERS

WIN ANOTHER MATCH

Defeated the Father Mathew Players by 22 Points at Whist on Their Fifth Night.

The fifth night of the whist contest between teams of St. Joseph's Sodality and the Father Mathew society resulted in a win for the former team in their rooms in Shetucket street. At the first round the Father Mathew players were 36 points ahead for the evening, but the visitors won in the second hour, making the net result a tie, 36 to 36 points. This places the Sodality players 46 points ahead of the Father Mathew players. The next round was a draw, 36 to 36 points. The Father Mathew players were given first, are as follows:
